

JUSTICE DEPLORES TRIVIAL LITIGATION

Clarke Bids Lawyers to Take Only Vital Cases to U. S. Supreme Court.

NEW YORK, February 4.—The mass of trivial litigation brought before the Supreme Court of the United States was deplored tonight by Associate Justice John H. Clarke in an address at a dinner of the New York University Law School alumni.

He urged lawyers, in order to conserve the time of the court, to consider as a citizen rather than an advocate whether the case was of sufficient importance to justify his calling it to the attention of a body primarily organized to deal with matters of greatest public concern. He also begged that the facts in a case be well and tersely stated and that briefs actually be made brief.

Certain Lawyers Scored.
"There seems to be a type of lawyer in every part of our country who, once he is retained in a case, no matter how trivial, sets to work with all the ingenuity he possesses to impart into the record a federal question which he thinks may enable him to carry it to the Supreme Court of the United States, if he should prove unfortunate in the courts below," said the justice. He added that cases came from every part of the earth, especially from the District of Columbia.

He attributed this not to a desire for local prestige, nor to a desire to postpone the day of ultimate settlement, but to the widespread desire to personally participate in the evolution of constitutional jurisprudence, which he characterized as laudable, but in many cases futile.

He added that, while it was not for him to eulogize the Supreme Court—which recently had been called "the living voice of the Constitution"—the scope of the court "has become so fateful that the effects of many of its decisions upon the welfare of our country are as great as would be the results of decisive battles in a great war."

Sources of Trivial Cases.
The fourteenth amendment to the Constitution, proclaiming that citizenship rights shall not be abridged, has been the source of most trivial litigation, he said, adding that expanding federal activities were operating to make a close second of the fifth amendment, providing for prosecution, trial and punishment, and setting forth that private property must not be taken for public use without compensation.

"I am not near enough to venture a prediction as to what the eighteenth amendment may ultimately do to us," said the justice, touching on the liquor question.

In conclusion, he asserted that all were living in a world so new that past experience could be of little use except as a warning. Pointing out the pressing problems facing the age, he declared that to lawyers in midcareer and to the younger members of the profession "this new world is bringing opportunities for pioneer and constructive thinking and action and service equal to, if not greater than, that of which the lawyer-framers of the Constitution made so much for us and for all men."

POWELL TO LEAVE POST IN FLEET CORPORATION

President to Withdraw March 4 After Six Months of Voluntary Service.

Joseph W. Powell, president of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, announced yesterday that he would terminate his connection with the corporation next March 4. He explained that private affairs would prevent him from continuing longer in his present post.

Mr. Powell has been connected with the Shipping Board and Fleet Corporation since last September 4, having completed with the request of President Harding and Chairman Lasker of the board that he undertake reorganization of the corporation.

Mr. Powell explained to Chairman Lasker when the request that he join the corporation was first made, that he could not give the time necessary to the government work, but eventually agreed to enter the government service for a period of three months without salary. When that time had elapsed, however, the reorganization of the corporation was in such status that he felt he must remain longer to carry it through, and on March 4 will have completed six months of voluntary service.

Both Mr. Powell and Mr. Lasker feel the Shipping Board announcement said, "that by that time the work of reorganization will be so well in hand that Mr. Powell will be free to carry out his expressed agreement of short service on which he joined with the board."

After Mr. Powell's retirement the work he has been doing will revert to Chairman Lasker, with Vice President Smull of the Fleet Corporation acting as its presiding officer. Mr. Lasker had agreed to make his services available in future to the board whenever needed for temporary emergencies.

FLASKS HIDDEN "ON HIP" SMASHED BY TURNSTILE, AT SUBWAY STATIONS

Special Dispatch to The Star.
NEW YORK, February 4.—"They save your time," apologized the subway management in placards to their patrons when turnstiles turned by a "nickel-in-the-slot" were installed recently at all stations. "But they lose your liquor," protested those patrons who were accustomed to carrying something "on the hip." The inventor of the turnstiles made the mistake of making them hip-high and scores of full flasks were broken in their owners' pockets when they failed to step lively enough. But protests to the management were unavailing and the only satisfaction the victims got was the advice to walk in backward.

POLICE DOG BREED BEGAN IN FRANCE

Paris Dealer Would Discard German Name—Hundreds Sold to Americans.

BY WILLIAM E. NASH.
By Cable to The Star and Chicago Daily News. Copyright, 1922.

PARIS, February 4.—German police hounds are no longer German. The name is a misnomer. In reality they should be known as French sheep dogs. So claims M. Joubert, sr., proprietor of the largest dog kennels in France, situated among the narrow picturesque lanes of Bourg la Reine, a suburb of Paris, half an hour's ride from the Orleans gate in a wheezy little street car.

"Most of the French sheep dogs come from Alsace," explained Joubert. "When the Germans seized that province in 1871 the dogs became spoils of war and had their name changed from Alsatian to German. The breeding of these dogs spread across the Rhine to the region of Mannheim and the training and reputation of the dogs were developed in a thoroughly German manner. Now, however, France has regained the lost province and therewith won the right to name in the original way the famous shepherd dogs of Alsace."

Trade Is Reviving.
"My best customers are Americans. Before the war I sold several hundred dogs per year in the United States. Trade is beginning to revive. See these tags? They will show you that yesterday I sold Greta and Anna, high priced and well trained bitches, to wealthy dog fanciers in New York. Here Joubert was interrupted by the wild clamor and barking of fifty husky wolf hounds in New York. Little stone cages on each side of the corridor in which we were standing. He had been speaking principally to Joseph Kallston Morris, a former resident of Lake Forest, Ill., who now owns a country estate five miles below Annapolis on Chesapeake bay, with accommodations for forty pedigreed dogs. Mr. Morris is in Europe on a pleasure trip and while here he intends to purchase several dogs, both in France and Germany, for transportation back to the United States. He may take part in the future, as in the past, in the blue ribbon canine shows of Chicago and New York. His dog Von Romer, born in Germany and trained in Holland for war work, is said to have been trained by the French army in the world for many years.

Dogs Trained for War.
"The United States is far behind Europe in the employment of trained dogs," said Mr. Morris. "During the war both France and Germany maintained thousands of these dogs for work at the front. The French army uses important numbers in the colonies, where they act as advance guards to small native ambushes. They are capable of driving large groups of prisoners to the rear without human aid. For years the Parisian police made use of them in ferreting out criminals. Now, however, they seem to be employed mostly by the French railways for work on the frontiers, where they even guard stations and patrol the tracks."

In conjunction with Benjamin S. Tracy of Scranton, Pa., and Miss Anne Tracy, a cousin of J. Pierpont Morgan, Mr. Morris figures among the leading sponsors of intensive dog training in the United States. He believes that dogs can be taught to do wonderful things by a little patient instruction. He has exhibited the results of his training work on several occasions to the American Kennel Club of New York city.

I. W. W. MEN HELD.

Will Be Deported if They Can Furnish Transportation.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., February 4.—Seven alleged I. W. W. men, deported from El Dorado yesterday and arrested here last night as they alighted from Rock Island train, today were held in jail pending decision as to their disposition. Chief of Police Rotenberry said they probably will be deported from Little Rock if all of them could furnish transportation out of the city.

Otherwise, he said, charges of vagrancy, which carry sentences to the county penal farm, will be placed against them. H. S. Julian, Kansas City attorney, who left El Dorado with them, was not apprehended last night.
